

Lana Moroz

Nurse Practitioner, Atrial Fibrillation Clinic, Vancouver Acute

Lana Moroz, a graduate of the UBC Master of Science in Nursing / Family Nurse Practitioner program is the NP in the Atrial Fibrillation Clinic at VGH where she supervises, collaborates and provides care to patients with complex medical needs in a culturally sensitive and patient centred approach.

Her dedication to clinical care is evidenced by her countless hours of work before and during the pandemic to keep patients safe, avoid their emergency visits, being knowledgeable about their health and safety helping them to receive equitable care.

Lana participates in the Quality Assurance and Improvement/Critical Incidence Committee for NPs and is a member of VCH Medical Staff Editorial Board helping to craft the organizations message with a EDI lens.

Over the last several years Lana has demonstrated her leadership in her clinical role through mentoring new staff both within her own program and new NPs in other cardiac programs.

#BreakTheBias

Lana through her interactions with staff and students demonstrates it is possible for women to find work/life balance but it is not easy. In her home life Lana is the matriarch of her loving family that includes her husband, two children and her elderly parents. She tries to balance their competing needs with those of her very busy and often short staffed position as a nurse practitioner in the clinic.
